A WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE

Senators Met With President Taft to Consider Legislation-Working Majority Secured.

Washington, D. C .- The conference at the White house, the president undoubtedly believes, has brought the regular organization senators and such a considerable number of near insurgents and real invergents together that there is no longer reason to fear the existence of a working and voting Republican majority in the senate.

The conference resulted in mutual concessions, a clearing of the surcharged political atmosphere and a realization on the part of every participant that something langible must grow out of the present session of congreen, if the house of representatives is not to be fast and the country thrown into such political confusion that Republican success in the next neighbor today that it was a sin to presidential campaign will be endangered.

While the president and his intimate advisers did not yield in any important essentials, certain modifications have seen agreed to with regard to the raiload bill that the majority of the Republicans in the senate can consistent y support it. From now on they will fight unitedly for its enactment. Other matters involved in the Tafe legislative program were considered to conserve the natural resources of the country. It was approved at the conference and will be taken up at the earliest opportunity. The hill jun-"My aunt advised me to try Cuti- tring the powers of the courts to is

FROM ROOSEVELT CAUCUS ON POSTAL BANK BILL

The Insurgent Republicans Will Insist Upon Free and Open Discussion if They Consent.

Washington, D. C .-- If the president's persistent demand for the passo of a postal savings bank bill at this session is to be compiled with that will only be done by means of a Republican house caucus which the insurgents will consent to attend and whose decision they may agree to abble by. The prospect now is that such a caucus will be held within the next two weeks and it will be a long drawn out affair, extending perhaps over three pights.

The insurgents, who are nearly all strongly in favor of the enactment of a postal savings bank law, are disposed to go into such a caucus with he assurance that no attempt at gagging will be made and that the important details of the proposed postal bank scheme will there be discussed freely, submitted to votes and only incorporared in the bill on the approval of a majority of the Republican house membership.
